WELCOME TO SPLIT
To the city of a 1700-year-old tradition!

Its inhabitants, gay and smiling, noisy as all southerners, but always kind, meet you with an open heart, sincerely and friendly.

We wish that you may feel at home in our city and that you become acquainted with its historical remains and, above all, with its people.

The objects which are worth seeing in this city and the natural beauty of its environment will inspire and delight you. If you sometimes get tired of the garishness and hustle of this temperamental southern town, just escape into one of its more silent quarters or take a stroll along the meandering coast of some of its many bays or over its gentle hillock »Marjan« and you shall experience a soothing influence of the murmuring waves which lap the beaches or of the vegetation with a mediterranean fragrance.

We extend you our welcome and hope to see you again!

Tourist Association of the Municipality of Split

»... If we were to select in our old world a nook where it would be most suitable to show to a friend how blue the sea can be and how charming Nature could be when alone, how luxuriant in spite of barrenness, we should send him to the Adriatic Littoral. And if a stage ought to be found in Europe to waken the sense of history in a friend, I would send him, without hesitation, to Split.«

(E. Maurry, Paris 1896)

THE CITY OF SPLIT, the Kastela (there are seven Kastelas: Sućurac, Gomilica, Kambelovac, Lukšić, Stari, Novi and Štafilić) and Podstrana (Strožanac, Grljevac, St Martin) Rivieras with ancient Salonae (today's Solin), the fortress of Klis, Stobreč and Trogir (old Greek towns of Epetion and Tragurion), all this represents an extraordinarily attractive and unique tourist area.

Split is the cultural, economic and tourist centre of Dalmatia, and because of its historical monuments, geographical position and its enchantingly beautiful surrounding it belongs to the greatest tourist attractions on the Adriatic Coast.

The historical nucleus of the town developed inside and around the walls of the Palace of the Roman Emperor Diocletian (built from 295 to 305 A. D.), and spreading outwards through the centuries the town has grown into a modern city bestriding now the adjacent peninsula and numbering about 200.000 inhabitants.

However, the actual development of the town began in the 7th century A. D. when, after the great European migration, the Emperor's Palace offered refuge and protection to the inhabitants of the provincial capital of Salonae who were fleeing from the oncoming migrants. It was then that the entire eastern coast of the Adriatic acquired the indelible Slavic imprint. Through its stormy history the town resisted many enemies and sieges, and has retained its folk culture and customs. As times and epochs succeeded one another they left vestiges behind which are mostly even today extant and visible: traces of the ancient Greek and Roman settlements, Diocletian's Palace, the oldchristian and oldcroat basilicas and cemeteries at Solin, the medieval fortress and mosque at Klis and many Romanesque, Renaissance and Baroque buildings together with the typical peasants' and fishermen's huts and cottages.

During the Second World War the inhabitants of this city showed many examples of great heroism, for which reason Split keeps an honoured place in the historical annals of the peoples of Yugoslavia.

Split is also important as a cultural centre with its scores of museums and galleries, numerous scientific institutions, its own university, many colleges and higher schools. Its performances »Split Summer« and »Festival of Entertainment Music« are well known. There are folklore groups and ensembles featuring original Dalmatian songs and folk dances, and many concerts are performed and exhibitions staged.

Split is also prominent in sporting activities, especially in marine sports. Its rowing, swimming, sailing and waterpolo clubs, its tennis, basketball, football, and athletic teams are always among the top competitors, and sometimes even the best in Yugoslavia.

CLIMATE

Although the sunny and warm summers attract always a great number of tourists, the mild mediterranean climate causes many visitors to come throughout the year. Here are some figures showing average temperatures outside the summer months and the main season:

Month	11	12	1	2	3	4
Air C°	12,6	8,6	7,2	7,8	10,4	14,1
Sea C°	18	16	14	13	13	14
Hours of sunshine	136	108	126	147	188	234

In Split the sun shines on an average 2.697 hours a year (in Rome 2.394, Davos 1.766, Nice 2.706), while the average sea temperature in winter is 14, in spring 16, in summer 22 and in autumn 20 degrees centigrade, which means that Split is the warmest place in the country.

Such favourable climatic conditions give to Split and its surrounding not only their traditional fame as pleasant summer resorts but also their ever growing popularity as winter resorts.

MAIN HISTORICAL MONUMENTS

The whole of Diocletian's Palace is a rare example of Roman architecture and the buildings which later over many centuries sprang up inside the Palace and round its walls are significant as indications of the way life at first smouldered and then throbbed inside and around this nucleus. Inside the protecting walls worth seeing are the Peristyle i. e. the square in front of the Emperor's Mausoleum which has been turned into a cathedral, the cathedral itself with its later adaptations (altar of St. Stasius made by the renowned local sculptor Juraj Dalmatinac in the 15th cent., the stalls lining the chancel on both sides with their beautiful wooden carving, the pulpit, all of them made by unknown artists in the 13th cent., the main entrance doors with their famous reliefs made by Andrija Buvina in the 13th cent.), Jupiter's temple with its well preserved original ceiling, the imperial vestibule, the southern wall of the Palace looking towards the sea and the recently excavated underground cellars which witness to the monumental design and construction of the Palace and which are now used as exhibition space and concert halls. There are also the so-called »Porta Aurea« (Golden Gates), »Porta Argentea« (Sliver Gates) and »Porta Ferrea« (Iron Gates), all of them entrance gates into the Palace which are wonderful examples of the monumentality of this architecture. You will be impressed by many medieval edifices such as the old Town Hall, now harbouring the Ethnographic Museum, the palaces of now extinct families of Milesi (Martime Museum) and Papalić (Town Museum) and a number of larger or smaller romanesque buildings. Of special historical interest is also the oldcroat chapel of St. Martin (9th cent.) situated above the Golden Gates. An illustrated tourist guide through Split will acquaint you in more detail with many other objects of historical interest.

SIGHTSEEING

Travel agencies (»Dalmacijaturist« and others) organise daily sightseeing tours of the local historical monuments (Diocletian's Palace, Meštrović Gallery and other museums, Solin, Trogir, Klis) for groups and individuals with expert guides. The illustrated booklet »Galleries and Museums of Split« will greatly facilitate your understanding and enjoyment.
